The first step in using Photoshop is to open your image file(s). To open an image in Photoshop, follow these steps: 1. Choose Edit Image. 2. A box opens with your image. 3. Choose Open. Sometimes, Photoshop may want you to save your current image file before opening another image file. In that case, you can choose Save As. 4. The Save As dialog box opens. 5. Navigate to the folder in which you want to save the image file. You can also choose Folder to save your file to the folder you're currently in. Click Save. Photoshop gives you the option of a zoom level for your image. A zoom level refers to the portion of the image you can see on the monitor. The default zoom setting is 100%. You can increase or decrease the percentage to zoom in or zoom out, respectively. Your image may be sized to fit your monitor or you may see a larger portion of your image on the screen. You can see how much of your image you see on the monitor in the bottom-right corner of the image window (Figure 2-5). You may also notice a small three-pointed arrow in the corner of your image. Click it to zoom in on that part of the image. Click it again to zoom out. You can also use the Zoom slider to zoom in and out of your image. Figure 2-5: The Zoom slider shows how much of the image you see on the monitor. If you have many images to view, it is helpful to scroll the image window down. You can also zoom in and out by dragging the zoom slider. 6. When you're ready, click Open. To quickly upload images from your computer to the Internet, choose File Send To Internet. The window that opens enables you to drag and drop your images into the window. You also have the option of choosing a web service to automatically upload the photos you select. An example of a web service is Shutterfly. (See Chapter 17 for more information.) * Finding and working with layers. You may know that your images may contain layers already. You can add extra layers, layers that contain the background, or layers that contain objects. Figure 2-6 shows a close-up of a close-up of a close-up of an image window with a layer already included. years in prison. His decision was motivated by his understanding of the minimum sentence he could receive for each conviction and the fact that he could be sentenced to consecutive terms. [9] Next, the trial court noted that the Guidelines were advisory. The trial court acknowledged that Wilson has strong ties to his family. It noted that Wilson was young, had served in the military, and had a good work history. The trial court discussed Wilson's drug use, illegal possession of a firearm, and the need to rehabilitate Wilson and protect society. It noted that Wilson had expressed an interest in working while incarcerated. The trial court acknowledged that it had considered the effect and weight of certain aggravating factors that had been alleged, weighed the evidence, and made the factual findings necessary to impose the maximum sentence available. [10] At the time of his sentencing hearing, Wilson did not object to the sentence imposed by the trial court. Generally, a sentencing error is waived when no objection is made at the time of sentencing. Ferrell v. State, 10 N.E.3d 1259, 1262 (Ind. 2014). Under Ind. Appellate Rule 7(B), we review the sentence for appropriateness under Appellate Rule 7(C). In appellate review of a sentence, we consider "whether the sentence imposed is inappropriate in light of the nature of the offense and the character of the offender." Ind. Appellate Rule 7(B). [11] Here, Wilson had a prior felony conviction in Illinois, as well as convictions in Indiana for failure to report to the county probation department, and a conviction for Class A misdemeanor driving while suspended. The trial court noted that the Court of Appeals of Indiana | Memorandum Decision 02A05-1608-CR-1880

What's New In?

Well the weather was a bit odd! We had 4 inches of snow where we were, about a foot in Pittsburgh and some places along the Ohio River. We had to make a couple of schedule adjustments. In the end, we were able to get a lot of work done and also enjoyed the festivities at the stadium. This past weekend was the first time I had ever shot a football game. The weather was cool and rainy so I was a bit nervous about how things would come together on camera. I need to do a better job preparing for rainy conditions. But my plan went off without a hitch and all the players and fans enjoyed watching the Maryland Terrapins. This project was focused on capturing a few players on the field. The idea was to capture a few individual athletes. Then just a few football players sitting together for a team picture. I wanted to experiment with two cameras to show the difference in the results. I recently posted a project that utilized the RED ONE camera and had a great response. A couple of people expressed an interest in seeing the RED DRAGON in action. Well, I decided to take the RED Dragon out for a test-drive. This session involved the Ravens at the Bears. This was my first attempt at shooting a football game. I have been researching and learning all I can about the sport, so I would not be asking any of these questions. But, I think I did alright with a few minor tweaks, a lot of trial and error, and trying to capture the moments as they happen. I did a bit of shooting at the Ravens game a couple of weeks ago. Below is a video of some of the great moments I captured. After I get some time to edit them down to about 15-20 minutes, I will post them as high quality photos. I have a few projects that are works in progress that I will be posting over the next few weeks. I am going to take you behind the camera and show you the process of the shooting, how things have evolved throughout the day, how the editing was done, and how the final products turned out. Below are two projects that were shot in my high school stadium. One is the stadium service team that puts out the game day garbage. They also collect broken and lost equipment before each home game. I wanted to show how they work together and capture them together. I also wanted to capture their smiles and interactions before and after a home game. It took a bit of time and
